Start with announcing your topic

Your topic is basically the fundament of any writing you prepare. Regarding, from which angle you look at your topic, it will reflect different aspects and it is always important to capitalize letters properly to make it look even better. It's better to begin with outlining your topic. There is no secret on how to start a research paper intro: you should just state your topic and add some connected with topic issues that bothers you a lot. This is a perfect strategy to intrigue the reader.

It is recommended to start with general info and then narrowing down to some concrete aspects. Try not to deepen into a state of things in the beginning, but explain your view on the topic. If you are going to use some difficult expressions in the central part of an essay, make them clear to any reader and point out their connection with your topic.

Stress on rationale

The rationale is the key element of your beginning. Once you stated the topic, it's time to prove it's very relevant and gives readers food for thought. The rationale serves as an indicator of both - the importance of your essay and your attitude to the issue. The rationale should be laconic and precise to show the reader the significance of your research.

State your thesis

Thesis statement marks the conclusive part of the introduction for research paper or research summary and transition to the actual research. This sentence supports all the things you have written before and collects all your ideas in a logical and concise saying. If your subject is too complicated, you should make your thesis statement comprehensible with it. The thesis is what runs through your complete essay, that's why the intro where a thesis is stated sets the tone for the entire paper.

Your thesis should:

- Give general info on topic
- Be engaging and precise
- Reflect the significance of raised issue

If all these are ready, the only thing left is to make the outline of a structure.

Conclude with the outline

When all the important work is done, it's time for the outline of your paper's structure. Not every mentor requires an essay structure overview in the introduction, but sometimes students are asked to stress on few aspects of their future research. This is not about the detailed depiction of every part of your work. The outline is a short paragraph, which consists of 3 or 4 sentences and represents your plan of the entire paper. You can also look for some essay introduction example to grab some ideas.
